New mediation project

Belmont community members will have the opportunity to acquaint themselves with a new mediation program Saturday during a special kick-off demonstration.

The Belmont Community Mediation Program, which will join Redwood City and San Mateo Neighborhood Boards, offers an alternative to police intervention, code enforcement officer assistance or court action.

The umbrella organization, the Peninsula Conflict Resolution Center, is based in San Mateo.

Trained volunteers in the program serve as mediators, providing a system which allows conflicting parties to resolve a problem amongst themselves.

From 10 a.m. to noon Saturday at Twin Pines Park, community residents are invited to observe the program.
